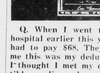
Questions and Answers



Q. When I went to the hospital earlier this year, I had to pay $68. They told me this was my deductible. I thought I met my deductible earlier when I had some doctor bills. Now I'm really confused. Can you tell me why I had to pay the deductible twice?

A. You didn't pay the same deductible twice. There is a deductible under each of the two parts of Medicare. For the hospital part the deductible is $68 for each benefit period and for the doctor bill part the deductible is $50 a year. You had met the $50 deductible with your doctor bills, but you had not yet met the hospital insurance deductible when you went into the hospital.

Q. I became disabled a couple of months ago and want to apply for monthly disability benefits from social security. I know I can't do my regular job any more. Who will decide whether my disability will keep me from doing any other work?

A. You apply at your social security office, but doctors and vocational specialists in a State agency (usually the Vocational Rehabilitation Agency) who have had experience in seeing the effects of disabilities upon peoples' abilities to work make this decision. They study all the facts you have submitted, the medical reports, and information about your training, skills, and education.
